IT is stated that the inflow of water into the Mitsu Pish! Co.'s coal mine at Nakanoshima has lately increase and caused a reduction in the output of coal. We believe there is, so far, no danger of the mine becoming entirely flooded : but whether there are any prospects of the water being got completely under control again we cannot say. The present out-put from the mine is 300 tons per day.

It is evident that the smiling "Talkoo" tal-pan, who was never, it seems, a persona grata with the senfaring community, is still less so since the Wiltshire incident cropped up, and Tuesday the 17th November, 1891, will ever be remembered by the "common sailors," "a section of the community," (to quote some of his own expressions) as the day when Edwin Mackintosh learned that, notwithstanding his fose dixis, that "the Government could not legislate "in respect to the cessation of compulsory but unnecessary Sunday labour, yet it can legislate and make any man, be he a "common officer" or a mighty B. & S. sal-pan, obey their laws : the Law being no respecter of persons.

HERE is something worse than "Fragrant Whisky's Murmur."

IT IS THE LATEST THING IN EASTERN POETRY :-voice and barsh !-

Oh, where is the swing of the swoonful swish,
And the voice of the film-film f rul ?
Methinks it mosas for the murky mold,
And the home of the hootful owl.

"Now swivel me swift from the surging spring, I'm weary of wold and wind; the grewsome graik of the jobberwock comes immering to my The feeble song of the sportsome freg comes solemnwise, soughing slow, and again l hear by the bournful birch the wall of his wimpled woe:--

Oh, where is the swing of the swoonful swish, From the land of the springful sprole? Must the blue mists blue on the drinkful drais, And freight with their frought my soul?

"I slept, I dreamed of Amelia Rives, the dim of the danksome dark, and methought I rode on a moonful man in the prow of a pullful bark. I wrought a rhymo as I roamed along, in style, however, is more than made up in the stream of the starful grote; I woke dawn in the dimpled day, and above is the rhyme I wrote."

THE testimonial-disease (observes a writer in the Sydney Bulletin) has spread even into the British navy. The other day some newspaper or other published... a number of unkind statements about the captain and officers of the alleged man-of-war Tauranga, now upon the Australian station, and thereupon the craw THE late Mr. J. D. Vaughan had, according rose up as one man, and presented the Captain with a culogistic document, since communito the daily press. It was a long and eloquen relations between the officers and men of ship are of the most cordial description." is the beginning of the new order of things, Ten or twenty years hence every captain will have a testimonial from his crew written in some such strain as this :---

We, the undersigned seamen of H.M.S. Panellin, hereby tentify that we have found Captain Staith a class, moret, and industrious officer, who has done his best to give satisfaction. During the time he was in our employment as commander we found him capable, cheerful, and energetic, and also need and tidy in his dress, and suare in general convenation. He is a respectful and pains taking person, and under ellicient superation will always be found useful. He is also always sober until 12 a.m., when the crew go ashore for the day, and invariably smokes on the ise tide of the ship, and his religious principles are unexceptionable. We find it pecessary to part with him, having saids other arrangements, but one confidently recommend him to any crew that may require his services.

This is the sort of thing the testimopial business always ends in. 'It starts on the assymption that it is so surprising a British officer should do his duty, that when he does it he needs a bowling eulogium from every body, concerned ; it appead till the officer who doesn't get a testimonial will presently be a blighted being fand it finishes in the apotheosis of drivel. (Before Chief Justice Sir J. Russell, and a Tury.)

THE SEWING COTTON TANGLE.

On again taking up the thread of argument in the Brook's Cotton case to-day, Mr Robinson for the defence called evidence to show that the strg's head cotton was made and imported into China before the goat's head brand, and that the marks and make-up of the German cotton were old established, and were chosen without any knowledge of Brook's trade mark. Chinese customers had certain fancies which all the different manufacturers had to observe. As an instance, three samples of "Spanish Stripes" were produced, two from English firms and one from a German firm, all very much alike. Which, asked the learned counsel, should be sued for infringement in this case? Should it again be the unfortunate Germans?

His Lordship thought that was a most inappropriate and uncalled-for expression. The way in which the "unfortunate Germans" were mentioned implied an instituation that on account of national feelings there was no justice to be had in this Court for everyone alike. Such class animosity could not be too strongly condemned.

taken seriously. Continuing, he went on to argue that each feature of the making up of the Photographs of the cotton factory were put in to show that the pictures of the mill on the boxes from different films was common and hardly to themselves. the jury had to say "Oh, we know all that : tell us something fresh!" Verdict for defendants, with costs.

The first of this series, published three months ago, was such a success that the talented author has been quite overwhelmed with a sense of his triumph. He has been on a grand burst ever since, and is now sobering down. That accounts for a little deterioration in style. What is lost by the superiority of subject. In the first case it was a very unpleasant subject, treated excellently; now it is an excellent subject,

"It was a dream | " Once upon a time there was a soldier. He was brave, and strong and honest, and simple, and generous, like all ideal soldiers. He was hardly quite as big as soldiers ought to be; on the contrary, he was short and perky, and did not impress you so much with awe and respect of his might and ferocity; rather be gave you the idea of a pleasant, cheerful, cock-sparrow sort of a This disposition. He was podgy.

There were only about three dozen civilians in the place, and they were mostly heathens; but that doesn't matter. They thought very highly of "Humpty Dumpty," and he Suddenly there was a change. The soldierman was promoted to be Governor of the Colony, for a short time; and then his very good qualities led him astray, for a similarly short time, In his uprightness and transparent honesty of soul he seemed to know nothing of lying, and log-rolling, and petty spite, and imbecility, and pure cussedness. In all his forty years' sojourn on, this wicked and foolish earth he seemed to have never made the acquaintance of any of these. Happy man! During this brief dream, however, several impressions which he received were carried into effect. For instance.— (1) The Kowloon gambling crusade. They told him this gambling could be put down, and should be put down. Well? Well, it couldn't. The attempt was made, the Government put itself into a false and foolish position, and now the crusade has dissolved. But not the gam-

The officials set the example, and at first he was inclined to follow suit. But he soon saw through it. He now sees that they are almost as human as anybody clsc.

(3) The Quarantine Question. First the Government policy was to jump on Mr. Whitehead and smother him. Then they found out that it really did need to be looked into.

(4) The coolie boarding-house regulations There are two great morals to be deduced here -one, that an important reform should be very carefully matured before it is put in force; and the other, that Chinese coolies are nasty things to deal with, especially if the dealings are of the butter-finger type.

William O'Brien, member of Parliament to-day made public a statement or manifesto in reply to the recent Parnellite defiances He writes: "I have 'waited since the funeral hoping that the late Parnell's leading supporters, knowing my relations with Parnell at Boulogne would have the manliness to disassociate themselves from the diabolical charges circulated broadcast by their special organ, that Dillon and myself hounded their leader to death." O'Brien continues by saying that as the insinuations as to his treatment of Parnell are not rebuked or repudiated by the men who know them to be false, he feels absolved from all obligations of silence in regard to the conference at Boulogne. The unalterable basis of all communications with Parnell at Boulogne was, first and last O'Brien says, his retirement from the leader ship. THE CHINESE DIFFICULTY.

The N. C. Daily News of the rith Inst. has the following editorial on the above subject :-It seems pretty clear that, as u-u-i, the Peking China has had her usual good fortune and the energy for which the Japan Moll praised Don Fernando Guzman, ex-President of this the British Minister so highly has died out, and things are about where they were a year ago. the discovery of lepro y microbes is no surprise | regret. No man was held in higher esteem by | Some claims have been settled, many promises have been made, the fireless Powers have taken into their own hands the policing of the river. and some 'offici is have been threatened that worse things will be fall them if they allow any more foreign property to be destroyed. Meanwhile, certain foreigners in Hankow have done one great service: The two Viceroys who have control of the Yangize valley from Ichang to the sea agree with the missionaries that the notorious anti-foreign and anti-Christian publications of Hunan are the chief cause of the riots; but while making general fulminations against the authors of these publications, they do not profess to have taken any steps to discover and abolish their source. The duty of tracking them to their source has been undertaken by Dr. this morning shows how thoroughly he has succeeded. He first discoverd the author of one of the most notorious of these books, he to death. The inhabitants, most of whom lost found at Huangpi the houses from which copies of it were being disseminated, and where blocks for reprinting it were being or had been cut; and he has now made public the name of the printer's shop at Changs's, in Hunan, whence they are delivered, as well as the names of eight patriotic gentlemen who have at their own expense sent out one hundred thousand copies each. All these facts have no doubt been brought to the notice of our energetic consul at Hankow, Mr. Gardner, who has in turn no doubt communicated them to the Viceroy at Wuchang. We do not imagine that there will be any result. No harm has fallen on Mr. Chou Han, though he asked to be punished if' he had done anything wrong in disseminating this literature; nor is it likely that any harm will befall the proprietor of the Teng Meu-hwa shop, or the Prefect of Changsha. It is as we said some of the phenomena have been checked, but the causes remain unchecked, to produce fresh The socialist seceders who withdrew from the phenomena after a decent interval, during which the foreign Ministers accept the assurances of from Paris. The mourning recently donned on | meeting in this city to-day. Many members of the Taungli Vamen that everything is quiet again, and will remain so. To Peking, Hunan is a slumbering volcano, with which they do not dare to meddle, and the good resolutions which fired the foreign Powers two or three months ago have grown cold. The settlement of the disturbancest Tenguan Fu, mentioned by our Hankow correspondent, is a typical one, and if assured the Pope nothing should occur to disturb | the British Minister is content with it, it must the tranquility of the Holy See, but it must be be all right. He is evidently now of opinion that remonstrance with China has been carried too far, and he has no doubt explained to the Tsungil Yamen that the indiscretion shown by the Hankow Defence Committee, in alarming H.E. Chang Chih-tung so far as to make him think that Wuchang was to be attacked, will not occur again. Perhaps we shall hear soon that it has been decided that it is unfriendly for British subjects to ask for compensation for the property they have lost, except at Wusueh.

Up to the latest dates the statistics showed 7,524 persons killed, and 9,458 wounded, whilst some 97,000 houses have been destroyed. The people, from the Emperor downwards, natives and fireigners, are doing their utmost by liberal contributions both of money and clothes to relieve the distress so far as may be possible.

Up to the present date, shocks of earthquake still continue—there having been upwards of 6 600 between the 28th October and the evening of the 4th instant—and it is reported that even Full-yama liself has suff-red.
